Receives No. 1 Hard Wheat

"Sandy" Foote, of the Alberta Pacific Grain Co., reports having received some No. 1 hard wheat from this season's crop. The wheat was of the 222 variety, weighing 63 pounds per bushel, with a protein content of 17.5 per cent. Mr. Foote claims that there will be more wheat marketed at Didsbury this season than at one time anticipated.

P., on Wednesday, September 2 and was fined $5.00 and costs, or 30 days, for failing to destroy noxious weeds on his property. Constable Cameron, R. C. M. P., Crossfield, prosecuted on complaint from Weed Inspector H. J. Steckley.

No More Scrip To Be Issued

It is hardly likely that any new scrip will be issued, but scrip which is turned in to the government will be re-issued, Hon. W. A. Fallow, Minister of public Works, told the Herald Tuesday morning.

Scrip had done what was expected of it, the minister stated. It had given work and wages to those who needed it.

"In the absence of Mr. Cockroft, I have supervised arrangements for redemption. There will be enough money on hand to redeem all the scrip, and this will remove any lack of confidence in it."

Those wishing to do so would be able to convert future holdings of scrip into Alberta credit, Mr. Fallow said. On the other hand, it would also be possible to obtain currency for it if preferred.

United Grain Growers Declare Dividend.

A dividend at the rate of 3 per cent has been declared by the Directors of United Grain Growers Limited for the financial year ending July 31st, 1936. Cheques will be mailed on September 15th, 1936, to shareholders of record at the close of business, July 31st.

L. A. Giroux Dies.

L. A. Giroux, K. C., 51, Edmonton barrister for 25 years and dean of the Alberta legislature, died Monday at Rochester, Minn., where he had gone three weeks ago for treatment at the Mayo Brothers' clinic. The message telling of his death was received by relatives in Edmonton.

Fire Destroys Olds Grist Mill

Damage estimated at $2,000.00 was caused by fire which destroyed Henry Mier's grist mill at Olds on Monday evening. The blaze was believed to have been caused by lightning. Unable to save the burning building the fire brigade gave its attention to adjoining buildings and prevented the fire from spreading.

The building was built of galvanized iron and was originally built by Mr. J. Duff as a hay shed. It has been used as a grist mill for a number of years.

Predict Strong Senior Hockey Team for Olds This Season

At a recent hockey meeting at Olds the members of the hockey executive hired Frank Coulson as coach of the Olds Club. Coulson coached Olds two years ago when they first entered senior hockey. Arrangements are under way in earnest to bring some of the outstanding senior hockey players in Alberta to Olds for the coming season. A number of these players have already been contacted and state their willingness to play in Olds this year. A much larger number are at the disposal of Coach Frank Coulson, who is arranging the lineup of the team. Hans Hansen, for the past four years manager of the Olds Hockey Club, will again be in the driver's seat.

Knox United Church Notes.

At all three appointments next Sunday the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed. We urge a full attendance of members and Christian friends. All who seek fellowship with God are heartily welcome. In the service of worship preceding the Sacrament the sermon theme will be, "God, the Giver of Life."

Don't forget Rally Day.—Sunday, September 20 is the day, and we want maximum attendance both at Sunday School and Church services throughout the charge.

Another reminder that the Missionary & Maintenance Fund Boxes will be opened in the course of the next few days. We need a considerable increase of contributions to maintain our usual offering to this fund. We urge the use of these boxes, and the "M. & M." side of the duplex envelopes, for the steady contribution of small gifts will accomplish much in sustaining this important work of the Church.

Community Hall School Fair, Sep. 16

The Annual Community Hall School Fair will be held Wednesday next, September 16. This year the pupils of six schools, Grand Centre, Rosebud, Gore, Mona, Neapolis and Jutland, are taking part and it is expected that the exhibits will be greater in number than for some years past.

The youngsters will exhibit their calves, colts, pigs, poultry, etc., as well as school work, sewing and cooking. There will also be sports and athletic events in the afternoon.

The judges will be supplied by the Olds School of Agriculture.

There will be an admission fee of 25 cents at the gate to help pay the expenses of the fair.

Protest Minimum Wheat Price

Directors of the Alberta Wheat Pool, meeting in Calgary for their regular monthly session, passed a resolution protesting against the fixed minimum and also the enactment which prevents the wheat board accepting deliveries until the price level goes below 90 cents a bushel.

In the words of the resolution the ruling "was considered tantamount to ordering withdrawal of the wheat board from fulfilling the function for which it was formed."

The Pool board expressed the opinion that the federal government in its action failed to consider its pre-election promise to market wheat at world levels and return to the growers in Canada a price commensurate with the cost of production.

"What the government's move virtually amounts to," the Pool directors stated, "is an order to the western wheat growers to accept financial rewards for their labor based on world levels. What other class in Canada, outside primary producers, are thus treated?"

"We feel that the policy of the government is reactionary and that the interests of the wheat growers are not receiving the consideration they are entitled to, particularly in view of the considerate treatment given to wheat growers by the governments of virtually every other important wheat growing country of the world."

"The Pools obtained a wheat board after a long struggle and view its forthcoming disintegration with alarm and regret. The world wheat problem is not solved by any means and Canada needs an active and aggressive wheat board."

Mountain View Council Discuss Feed Situation

At the meeting of Mountain View Municipal Council the feed and seed situation, as a result of hail damage, came in for considerable discussion.

At the request of the government the secretary had prepared a report on the possible seed relief requirements, which he presented to the council. The report estimated that 26,000 bushels of wheat, 20,000 bushels of barley and 20,000 of oats would be required. It is thought that there would be sufficient seed wheat in the district but that it would be necessary to ship in barley and oats. A resolution was passed asking that the government be asked to provide free freight on feed, fodder and seed to be shipped into the Didsbury and Olds districts.

A communication was read advising that the government's share of direct relief had been cut to 61 per cent. A letter was also read regarding the national registration of persons on relief. The secretary reported that he was making an effort to have all those on relief to register.

The district engineer asked the council for a list of bridge requirements and four bridges were reported for inspection.

A resolution was passed, authorizing the reeve and secretary-treasurer make arrangements with the Bank of Montreal for a loan for school and municipal purposes.

The report of the municipal inspector, who had inspected the book of the municipality, was read and found favorable.

An application for old age pension and one for mothers allowance were approved.

British Sentiment Still Dominant

If the face of Canada, the outward form of the country as expressed in customs, modes of life and even forms of speech, is becoming more Americanized with the march of time, the heart of the Dominion, as represented in the spirit, the sentiment of her people, remains as truly British as in United Empire Loyalist days.

The foregoing, in brief, is the answer to those timorous souls in this country or in Great Britain, who ever and anon raise the bogey of ultimate American domination of Canada and see in the adoption of every new device from the United States another nail in the coffin which is supposed to be in construction for the interment of the tie which binds this country to the Motherland.

Those who raise the issue in fear and trembling, overlook the fact that the invisibility of the tie constitutes its great strength, because it is the spirit within and not the nature of the outward shell which guides the destinies of nations, even as it does of the individual.

Something of this truth must have inspired the remarks of Carl Goldenberg in an article in the June issue of the Fortnightly, published in London, England under the caption "Americanization of Canada" in which he divests the effects of the American influence in this country of some of the terrors which it inspires in timid or reluctant breasts.

"The alleged 'Americanization' of Canada," says Goldenberg in a very thoughtful and analytical article, "is usually regarded as a regrettable and undesirable trend. It is too often forgotten that Canada does not have to be 'Americanized', because Canada is a North American nation.

"The 3,000 miles of boundary that separate Canada from the U.S.A. are a purely imaginary line. The people on each side of this line, in the main, speak the same language, have the same habits and ways of thought, and dress in similar fashions. They see the same moving picture films, they listen to the same radio programmes and they read the same periodicals. Every day thousands cross the boundary line each way as though it did not exist. And proximity makes all this inevitable. Great Britain, after all, is separated from Canada by the width of the Atlantic Ocean."

Mr. Goldenberg might have added that this very proximity, this growing intercommunication which is being accelerated with improved forms of transportation and by increasing trade relations will just as inevitably result in increasing the American impress on Canadian externals with greater celerity as time goes on.

Quoting statistics the writer goes on to point out that the source of Canadian capital has shifted from London to New York since the Great War, but sees nothing terrifying in that, for he adds:

"In answer to the bogey of 'American economic penetration' it may be pointed out that, although U.S. investments are very extensive in so far as the 'key' industries of Canada are concerned, they are not subject to American economic control, nor do they seek to promote American political influence. In any event, Canada is rapidly ceasing to be dependent on foreign capital and is actually becoming an exporter of capital. Canadian investments abroad now amount to almost $2,000,000,000."

Despite these geographic and economic American influences on Canadian life, "it is important to remember," says Mr. Goldenberg, "that Canada's political system is British and the majority of her population is of British origin. There exists a strong sentimental attachment to the mother country and the Crown."

And if that were not sufficient to ensure the preservation of the British influence in the hearts of the people of this country there is the loyalty of the French-Canadian population to be reckoned with as a factor. That is Mr. Goldenberg's opinion as expressed in the following words:

"They (the French-Canadians) are devoted to the country and particularly Quebec and jealously guard their constitutional rights. They are wary of any change which might affect the relative importance of their status in Canada. Hence they oppose immigration. They also fear the influence of the U.S. and oppose 'American penetration' . . . They value the British connection very highly and oppose attempts to transfer the power to amend the British North America Act, which embodies their rights, from the British Parliament to the Canadian Parliament."

More arguments might be advanced in support of the general contention that there is little need to fear the so-called American penetration but enough has been said to allay serious alarm on that score and especially when it is remembered that destiny is dominated by the spirit rather than the material.

The force of wind increases with the square of the velocity. A 30-mile wind compares with a 10-mile wind as 900 compares with 100. For this reason, a small increase in velocity accounts for a great increase in wind damage.

Shaw At Eighty Is Physical And Mental Marvel

George Bernard Shaw has reached his 80th year. G. B. S. is a vegetarian. So whatever Shaw is today, the credit, or the blame, can be given to vegetables and fruit. He is not, as he says of his meat-eating friends, one of the carnivores. Compose of carrots appeals to him more than a burly beefsteak; a baked apple more than a black bass. At 80, Shaw has one of the most active and alert minds in the world; physically, he will walk or swim most men half his age into exhaustion. A great many men believe they would tire easily or be unable for hard physical labors if they did not eat plenty of meat. The meat eater will also probably agree that he should take plenty vegetables, preferably uncooked, but he would laugh at the idea of doing a day's work every day on an exclusively vegetarian diet all the year around. Still, the fact remains that George Bernard Shaw is a physical and mental marvel at 80, and he is never ill.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of fluid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 20c.

An Unusual Operation

Transfusion Of His Own Blood Saved Boy's Life

A transfusion of his own blood received credit for saving the life of Sam Owen, Jr., 11, of Bassett, Arkansas.

Accidentally shot recently while at play Sam was brought to a hospital in Memphis, Tenn. The bullet followed a diagonal course through his body, stopping in his right arm.

The wound above the heart bled little on the outside, but internal tears caused blood to accumulate on the right side. Hospital surgeons, making three incisions there, found the blood clean and pure.

They removed the blood from the side and injected it back into the veins by a transfusion in his leg. Attendants said this saved the lad's life.

Mother Superior Sees Outside World After 47 Years

When Sister Mary Pius, mother superior of a Dominican convent at New Orleans, Louisiana, went to Toronto to see her sick brother, it was the first time in 47 years she had been in the outside world. She had not set foot outside the walls of the convent in that time. The brother, John McMullen, and the nun, now 70, had not seen each other since they said goodbye in Ireland when she left to enter the convent.

The careful driver came to the railroad crossing. He stopped, looked, and listened. The only sound he heard was the car behind crashing into his gas-tank.

Plans Have Been Approved

Simplicity Is Keynote Of King George Memorial At Windsor

Plans for the monument to King George at Windsor—the town from which he selected the royal family's present surname—have received approval from King Edward and Queen Mary.

A tender for execution of the work has been accepted, and the memorial should be ready for unveiling next spring, when King Edward is expected to preside at the ceremony.

Sir Edward Lutyens has designed the memorial so that the central feature is a stone cenotaph of massive dignity, yet simple in ornament. On the top is a carved representation of the royal emblems resting on a cushion.

Upon the steps leading up to the cenotaph will be carved the inscription:

George V.

First Sovereign of the House of Windsor

Below and in front of the monument will be a rectangular basin of water, with two raised fountains, one on each side. The site of the memorial is directly below the walls of Windsor Castle and in the centre of the town.

Search May Be Ended

Tibetans Believe New Dalai Lama Has Been Found

"Ah Ka Ma"—the mystic three-word clue said to have been revealed to the regent of Tibet while he sat by the Holy Lake of Kali—may quickly end the nation-wide search for the reincarnation of the Dalai Lama.

Tibetans believe that the spirit of the Dalai Lama, supreme ruler of the country and head of the all-powerful priesthood, enters, at the moment of death, the body of a baby born at precisely the same time.

The Tashi Lama, the second spiritual leader of Tibet, who is living in exile in China, has sent a remarkable letter to Lhasa, stating that he held a ceremony at "the Carnival of Purification," attended by thousands of Buddhists from China and Tibet.

During the ceremony, he says, a woman, holding in her arms a two-year-old child, approached the Tashi Lama and caught hold of his body. After the ceremony the Tashi Lama ascertained that the woman is "Kamatso," wife of a man in the region of Amdo. It is believed in Lhasa that this child may be the reincarnation of the Dalai Lama, who died two years ago.

The regent's vision revealed the words "Ah Ka Ma." It is supposed that "Ah" indicates the Amdo region and the "Ka" and the "Ma" indicate "Kama", the name of the child's mother. This new "revelation" is now being considered by the Great Lama's government in Tibet.

Maid Helped Inaugurate Automatic Phone System In Portugal

How she helped inaugurate the automatic telephone system in Lisbon, Portugal, has just been learned by the housemaid in the home of the Prime Minister. A demonstration had been arranged at which the President of the Portuguese Republic was to speak to the Prime Minister, and the conversation broadcast. The call was put through. Due to a misunderstanding the Prime Minister was out, and the maid answered. "Well, how's the ceremony getting on?" she asked. "I'm sure I shall never learn to use this new-fangled clocklike thing." To this the President replied: "Oh, the ceremony is going off extremely well. Do not be afraid to use the clocklike thing. I have found it extremely simple to ring up." And the ceremony was over.

Actresses Report Strange Happenings At Village In India

Charges made by two actresses have sent the police of Nowabshah, India, on a "ghost" hunt. The actresses declared that when they returned home after the evening performance an old fakir standing at the foot of the stairs beckoned them to follow him upstairs. When they reached the top he was gone, and in his place were two cats "with sparks shooting out of their eyes." The women looked out of the window, and were horrified to see a young man hanging from a roof and shouting that he was being murdered. They dashed down to help him—only to see him jump down, "and disappear into thin air." This was enough for the two actresses. They called in neighbors as protection, packed their things and left for quieter lodgings.

Recovered Lost Purse

B.C. Woman Was Happy To Find Contents Intact

E. A. Cook, a janitor at the British Columbia museum, picked up a purse and, without opening it, put it to one side until someone claimed it. An hour later a woman appeared, rushed about frantically, looked behind museum cases and eventually approached Cook.

"Is that what you are looking for," he asked, producing the purse.

"Yes," she said, and opening the purse, pulled out a roll of money and counted it.

"That's right, $915," she said, "thank you," and walked out.

Empire Shipping Lines

Sir Edward Beatty Is Organizing To Meet Competition In The Pacific

Reports that empire shipping lines in the Pacific are getting together under the leadership of Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and are organizing to meet foreign competition are discussed in an editorial in the London Daily Mail.

"This would indeed be a welcome step," says the newspaper. "Sir Edward Beatty is known the world over as president of the famous Canadian Pacific Railway and is probably the foremost business chief in the British empire. When he takes an affair in hand he never fails to carry it through. In this case there is a special need of initiative and energy such as he possesses in so high a degree.

"Four years have elapsed since the British government promised the British lines support in the face of the competition of American vessels," it continues. "These latter have received large subsidies and also have as an aid the coastal reservation which closes to British liners the trade between such points as the United States and Honolulu.

"The British government ought therefore to grant a very handsome subsidy to the British lines to equalize the position. It is now or never if the British lines are to be saved as their reserve funds are exhausted.

"If Beatty can infuse 'pep' into the governments concerned and secure an adequate British service in the Pacific he will have made yet another immense contribution to the welfare of the British empire."

Seaside Resort For Workers

Nazis Planning Colossal Playground Exclusively For Working Class

A "colossal" seaside resort exclusively for the working class is being conjured up by the Nazis from a lonely strip of beach between Binz and Sassnitz, on the island of Ruegen, in the Baltic Sea. Twenty thousand factory girls, miners, workmen, kitchen maids, farm-hands, painters, cobblers, plumbers, engine drivers, train conductors and postmen, with their wives and children, will live in 3,350 rooms all facing the sea. Each day about 3,000 workers will arrive and 3,000 depart, each group staying 10 days. Thus in five months 300,000 are to be accommodated.

They will eat 80,000 rolls and 25,000 pounds of bread a day which will be baked in their own bakery. A private laundry will wash 16,000 pounds of laundry daily. Meals will be served in 10 gigantic "food houses."

The beach has a length of five miles of which more than three miles will be equipped with promenades, cafes, resting places, etc. A pier 2,250 feet long will be built.

Cosmic Rays

Huge Electrical Machine For Controlling Speeders Of The Sky

A huge electric "traffic cop" for those mystery speeders of the universe—cosmic rays—nearly completed in the University of Chicago laboratory of Dr. Arthur Holly Compton, noted physicist.

It was designed on the same general principle as "speed traps" for human motorists. The idea was to pull them out of line as raced along, slow them down, and take their finger-prints."

Because the rays are believed to travel almost as fast as light—which beats everything else by whizzing along at 186,300 miles a second—powerful electric currents are required to brake them even slightly.

Thus the "traffic cop" is a 12-ton magnet capable of producing an attraction in a cubic foot of air 40,000 times as great as the earth's magnetic pull.

Has Useful Gift

King Edward Always Able To Make Appropriate Speech

When King Edward (as Prince of Wales) was in Canada and had to make a speech at almost every railway division point, people said his speeches were written by a secretary. When, years later, he began appearing at important public functions at home and abroad, with his speeches growing in maturity, it was concedingly admitted that perhaps he improved on the manuscript of a "ghost." To certain people, always wise about what goes on in high places, no statesman or ruler ever has a mind of his own.

No "ghost" could have written the little speech which King Edward made to 8,000 Canadian Vimy pilgrims at Buckingham Palace. Yet, impromptu as it was, made upon impulse, it was a model of its kind. John Morley once said that a good speech depended upon where it was made, how it was made, and what was said, adding the gay cynicism that the least important was the last. It was a poor thing for Morley to have said. A good speech depends almost mainly upon one thing: whether it is appropriate. If a speaker can feel and touch the mood of an occasion, if, in other words, he can have a sense of proportion, then he is speaking well.

What made King Edward's speech to Vimy pilgrims a model was his ability to be appropriate. He was not speaking as a Monarch on a great State occasion. He was speaking as a war comrade to old comrades on a festival occasion. Hence the opening touch of reverence regarding Vimy Ridge, the quick passage to the happier circumstances of this day, the touch of humor, followed by a simple welcome to Buckingham Palace, the sincere wish for a happy journey home. In thought and simple diction, in freedom and pomposity and artificiality, no speech could be happier.

Monarchs are not wont to speak like this. Nor great rulers. Stalin speaks like a page from Marx. Hitler is reminiscent of an illiterate Nietzsche. Mussolini recalls Napoleon. Yet, worse than these are the ordinary run of speakers who, every time they get upon their feet, think they must imitate Burke. It is the sort of thing that makes public speaking a plague.—Ottawa Journal.

A little girl sitting in church, watching a wedding, suddenly exclaimed:

"Mummy, has the lady changed her mind?"

"What do you mean?" the mother asked.

"Why," replied the child, "she went up the aisle with one man and came back with another."

In Japanese feudal days, the Samurai, or soldiers constituting the lesser nobility, received their yearly salary in rice. A samurai of high rank earned as much as 250 tons of rice annually.

The Value Of Fear

Being Carelessly Confident In Actual Danger Is Foolish

Those who are inclined to deny the value of fear as a human safeguard are invited to consider the testimonial offered by Dr. Charles Edward Monroe.

Dr. Monroe who lives in Washington, D.C., is now 87 years old and is considered one of the great authorities on high explosives. He has handled them throughout most of his adult life.

Now looking back on his hazardous career, the Doctor credits his escape from violent disintegration to the fact that he always was in fear of the death lurking in his test tubes.

"I always was afraid, and for that reason I always was careful," he confessed a day or two ago. "I respected the materials I worked with. I was often more afraid of my associates than of the explosives, and always did as much of the work as possible myself in order to be sure of it."

The lesson is that fear like a high explosive is a good servant, if kept under control.

Had Dr. Monroe ever allowed his feeling to degenerate into panic his actual danger would have become greater than it would have been had he been carelessly confident.

But his was a fear born of good sense and reason, and productive of prudence. Such a fear is no bar to courage. Indeed, people who have it frequently are the most courageous of men and women; and if everybody possessed it, there would be a big immediate decrease of avoidable and useless tragedies.—Detroit Free Press.

A Lost Opportunity

Nations May Soon Regret Failure Of Disarmament Conference

Whatever the outcome of the international situation, the taxpayers of all the nations involved are bound to feel the effect in enormously increased financial burdens even if the supreme calamity of war is averted. The result will be that in the near future men may look back with bitter regret at the missed opportunities of the disarmament conference and repeat the old lament of the lack of reason and sound common sense with which the world is governed.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Famous People Superstitious

Even Queen Victoria Had Ideas About Friday And Thirteen

Queen Victoria possibly picked up some of her strong superstitions during her many visits to Scotland. This queen could not be persuaded to begin any journey on Friday, and sitting thirteen at a table was something she would not contemplate for an instant.

Nearly all airmen are superstitious and invariably carry a lucky mascot when starting on a dangerous flight. Colonel Lindbergh pinned his faith on an elk's tooth, and the Molliions take a rusty and well-worn horseshoe wherever they go.

The French, although possessing many hard-headed traits, are intensely superstitious and Napoleon himself was no exception to the rule. It is considered very unlucky in France to whistle indoors, and the great French conqueror once reduced an aide-de-camp for daring to pipe a melody within the precincts of the Palace of Fontainebleau.

Boxers are superstitious people, Max Baer will not go anywhere without a small goliwog which he looks upon as having contributed to all his good luck in the past. Carpenter's mascot was a small golden wishbone which he carried on his watchchain.

Actors have their own superstitions which exist nowhere else but on the stage. One is that no one must mention the title of a play on its first night until the curtain has risen. Martin Harvey became so nervous at an infringement of this custom on one occasion that he completely forgot his opening lines, and had to improvise hastily.

Eleanora Duse made a mascot of a mongoose given to her in India, and would not be consoled when it died. She firmly believed that her acting days were over! And it is well known that her great contemporary, Sarah Bernhardt, slept in her coffin every night for years in the belief that it would postpone her death. Willie Clarkson, perhaps the greatest wig-maker in the world, left a dinner party attended by distinguished guests because he had spilled the salt.

Kemal Pasha, who has done so much to modernize Turkey, is himself a believer in superstitions. One of these is that it is unlucky to bring flowers into the house, and their absence is one of the first things noticed by his visitors.

Attracts Few Visitors

Not Many Tourists Make Trip Through Sewers Of Paris

The famous sewers of Paris, which are open to the public—but seldom prove a drawing card—attracted 1,107 visitors in 1935. The underground tour from the Place de la Concorde to the Madeleine church is taken in small boats in the underground passages, made famous by Victor Hugo's "Les Misérables."

The sewers are open to the public only in summer months, one day a week, and the eerie boat trip can be made for 3 francs per person. Last year's traffic brought about $285 into the coffers of the French government.

Today Parisian sewers extend from 600 to 700 miles in length, but only a quarter of a mile is available to curious tourists.

At one of a series of lectures a woman wanted a seat and General Garfield brought one and seated her. "Oh, you're a jewel!" she said in appreciation.

"Oh, no," replied Garfield, "I'm a jeweler; I've just set the jewel."

Free Flock Approval & Blood Test Service

As an encouragement to poultry raisers in the Province of Alberta who undertake Record of Performance under Federal jurisdiction, the Poultry Branch of the Alberta Department of Agriculture will provide free flock approval and blood test service this year to all flocks entered and in good standing in R.O.P.

Full particulars with respect to making entry in R.O.P. and details of the work may be obtained from the Dominion Livestock Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. As the period for receiving entries closes early in the fall, those interested are advised to act with as little delay as possible. G. M. Cormie, Poultry Commissioner, in making this announcement, points out that each year shows a decided increase in the demand for R.O.P. stock, and this is another means whereby the poultrymen of Alberta can create additional markets for their products.

GRAIN TRADEand the Minimum Price

The Western Producer in its issue of September 3rd, referring to the decision of the government in regard to the minimum price for wheat, and its reception by Western farmers, says:

"To them and to many of those whom they elected it must have come as a cruel disillusionment to find that their government chose to listen to and be guided by the grain trade and other reactionary elements in their midst, while refusing even to acknowledge the submissions of organized agriculture."

The implication that the grain trade or any section of it has at any time made representations to the Government, or to the Canadian Wheat Board, or has tendered advice to those bodies, relative to the establishment of the minimum price for wheat at 87 1/2 cents per bushel or any other figure, is absolutely false.

The interests of wheat producers and of the grain trade are identical in regard to grain prices. The prosperity of the grain trade in Canada is bound up with the prosperity of producers. It has no interest in keeping prices down. The figure at which the minimum price should be set is a matter to be decided by the Government, having in view the loss which it might be prepared to sustain in the event of a decline in world wheat values. The grain trade has repeatedly stated its belief that producers must be assisted to overcome the adverse conditions resulting from drought and excessively low prices. But it has been opposed to attempts to fix the price at which Canadian grain should be offered in the export markets, or to hold Canadian wheat at prices above its relative value in world markets, because such attempts must result in (a) loss of markets and diminution of sales, (b) the creation of burdensome surpluses, (c) eventual loss both to producers and taxpayers, and (d) encouragement of uneconomic and high-cost production by our competitors.

In the continuance of the open market for grain and the preservation of every available channel through which Canadian grain can be sold, are to be found a guarantee of the best returns to Canadian producers. To maintain such returns is as much the desire and interest of the grain trade as of the producers themselves.

There is room for honest difference of opinion as to what the minimum price should be. But there is no justification for false imputations of motive and act.

Thou Shalt Not Love

She watched her father fade, day by day. The physician who had known Ellison all his life, who had brought Starr into the world, was plainly baffled. There was nothing organically wrong with Professor Ellison. Weakness, caused by exposure in the desert, the doctor called it tentatively.

It was after the funeral that Starr remembered how keenly the doctor had eyed her.

"You don't look any too well yourself, Starr, my dear," he had told her, concernedly. "You're like a shadow. Better let me prescribe something for you."

"No! No!" Starr wheeled around in a panic.

What did he mean? Did he think she was ill? Crazy thoughts raced through her mind.

"Thou, and thy children—" John Lessing's words—"It's got me, Ellison. It'll get you, too—and Starr."

She cried defiantly to herself: "No, it shall not get me! I won't let it! I'll fight!"

But it's pretty hard to fight when you're alone in the world, when you've been reared with the idea that you'll always have money, and suddenly there is none. When you can't get work, and a deadly weariness drags and drags at your limbs. Starr knew. She had tried—so long. She had come away from the New England home town. No one should ever know how badly everything had really gone. Her chance to make her way alone would, she was sure, be better in New York, where no one knew her, where she could really get out and fight. It hadn't worked out that way. There was no work here, either. No hope.

It was a strange whim which finally had sent Starr Ellison that morning to the New York specialist who knew nothing about her, or who she was; nothing of her history. It was well, she had argued, to see another doctor.

And so he had looked at her, pounded her here and there, did all the usual things, said a lot of the usual things, some of which she scarcely comprehended. But that one sentence of his had registered indelibly:

"You might as well know the worst. You won't live another six months."

Subconsciously she had been waiting to hear just that.

The curse of Tut-Amen-Ra had caught up with her.

Somebody was gently shaking her by the arm. Startled, she realized that she was still staring like one hypnotized at the bas-relief on the vase which was so frighteningly like the mummy face of Ama-Sun. Even before she glanced up to see who was disturbing her, she realized in a flash that at least no longer would she be afraid of things Egyptian. She had stared them down—they and their curses. They knew now she was not afraid. She would see it through gallantly.

Her upturned gaze showed a uniformed man who was smiling down at her.

"Got to close up now, Miss," he said. "Reckon you'll have to come out of Egypt."

Starr leaped to her feet. "Oh, I'm so sorry! I hadn't realized—I didn't know—"

The attendant laughed indulgently. "Oh, that's all right, Miss. We're used to that. Lots o' folks come in here and get clean wrapped up in thinking they're Cleopatra or somebody, and we got to rouse 'em up. It's a right interestin' place, Egypt, ain't it?"

Starr smiled at him mechanically, but she did not answer his question as she moved away, nodding her thanks. If he only knew! If he only knew!

CHAPTER IV.

Never again would Starr Ellison be afraid of Egypt or the relictuaries things of the ancient Pharaohs. She might resent, might refuse placidly to accept the doom of their curse upon her father's house and upon herself, but during that hour spent in the Museum she had flung her defiance to their gods and priestesses, and would go out to meet them with head held high. The damage was done now. They could do no more.

Walking through the Park in the dusk of the dying day, the thought of poetic justice was in her mind. For the first time since that terrible trip to the land of the Pharaohs she gloried in the thought of her own physical beauty that resembled that of their priestesses. If the time ever came, she meant to turn that to account.

Then she laughed. With no touch of merriment in the silver ripple. If the time ever came! And her with six months—!

Tired after her day's exertions and the strong emotions she had felt in the Metropolitan, Starr sank down on a bench sheltered by some clustering shrubbery, touched to pinks and oranges and russet by the oncoming finger of winter. She must have slept. She did not know. Only when she came to herself with a start, the night had come. Electric lights flickered along the driveways and beyond were the tall buildings with their tops hidden by night mists and crowned with the city's jeweled lights. From over the minarets of the tall buildings south of the Park hung a moon, a moon in an alien sky above a modern city, but it must have been just such a moon as had given birth to Isis. The limbs of the trees from which the leaves had already fallen stood out against the sky as if carved of ebony. The Park was a place of purple shadows.

The muted notes of a low-voiced automobile siren sounded eerily like the plaintive notes of a reed pipe creeping up from an Egyptian river, and the rumble of the El in the distance was the more distinct throbbing of a darabukkeh. The walls of the high buildings beyond the Park walls, framed in the twinkling lights, were dazzlingly white—white as the walls of houses she remembered silhouetted against the sands of the eternal desert. Almost she could imagine giant bougainvillea trailing down their immense heights.

Again Starr Ellison laughed and marched herself straight for the Park entrance. This Egyptian business was getting to be an obsession—of a different kind since this afternoon's private seance. She was seeing Egypt everywhere.

"It won't do!" she told herself firmly. "You're getting light-headed, that's what! You, who just a little while ago was having mental hysterics admiring a steak in a cafe window."

Plainly enough food was indicated, but where should she go? She had quite forgotten, in the stress of other thoughts, the sight of the man who had driven her to the refuge of the Museum. Just as well. She would never see him again, of course. But there still was the yearning for life that would not be downed as she swung out of the Park and headed down the first street she saw. Her mind was made up. For once she meant to go some place where there was music—life!—and for just a few minutes be of that life.

Where, was a question, but surely she had enough to pay for one peep vision of what was going on in New York this night and every night. The slim collection of folded bills might be missing afterward, but what did it matter? There was not enough to pay Mrs. Maloney, anyway. She had to go somewhere. . . .

Starr never had any slightest idea what led her to the La Luna cafe. She had never heard of it; did not know it from a hundred or more other such night life spots in the city. In fact in all her life all she had ever known of any night-life cafes were those she had briefly glimpsed in Egypt. Perhaps what determined her choice was the tall doorman who wore a tarbush. . . .

It was early and there was no sign of that turbulent joy of which she had heard when a waiter led her to a side table where she sat in state on a red-morocco-covered bench. There were a few people at the tables, none of them eating, but all with drinks before them.

A gaily uniformed orchestra was playing sporadically, and couples danced about the small floor. But as Starr sat alone, sipping her cocktail, all her ardor at buying a bit of life for herself for a dollar and a quarter dampened. It began to look drab to her. She didn't like the people around her either—bored, unpleasant-looking men, and plainly blatant women from whose overheard scraps of conversation she could make out that they held a decided preference for Elizabethan English. It was not working out at all. The dollar and so forth was going—for an indifferent cocktail or so. And she wasn't getting a thrill at all.

She sighed. Well, it was all of a piece. You couldn't force Fate, one way or another. With less than five dollars you couldn't even get intoxicated enough to forget you had only six months to live, and if this sort of thing was life, the best you could say for it was that it was synthetic.

Desperately she was trying to make up her mind that she would leave this place, hunt up some other where racketeers went, if she could find such a place—they might be living life in the raw, but at least, one was told, they lived it. Anything, anything! would be better than this remembering—When. . . .

The door opened, bringing in a blast of sharpened night air and the wisps of fog that were beginning to gather, refuting the gorgeous day's promise of beautiful weather. It must be starting to rain, too, for the man who came in was shaking drops from his hat as he handed it to the hat check girl, glancing around at the place as though he knew it, but with a shrug of resignation which spoke of any port in a storm.

Then Starr saw his face as he started across the floor toward the bar! He saw her, too, a moment later, and the surprised smile turned into a grin. How was Starr to know the quick thoughts that were behind the grin on Michael Fairbourne's face? It looked as if he were glad to see her—and alone—in quite such a place as La Luna. Fairbourne had not entered in such blissful ignorance of the reputation of the place as had Starr Ellison. In his mind, her being there—alone—placed her. It was not an unpleasant surprise.

Quickly he crossed the room, stood looking down at her a moment.

"We've met before," he remarked lazily, as she remembered he spoke. She nodded, and glanced up at him shyly. This time she was determined not to run away.

"This is the third time," she said, and smiled, her unbelievably long lashes lowering over her unbelievably long eyes in what might have been construed as a challenge.

"Right!" he said. "Three times and out! What a blessed coincidence that it started to rain when I was passing this—ah—er—dump—and not a cab in sight. . . . May I sit down?"

Starr moved over, saying nothing, but feeling the two bright spots of color that must be brightening her camellia cheeks. The man said: "Maybe they're right when they say there's Fate in the lives of men and women."

Starr nodded. "Three Fates. You can't pick and choose."

The man glanced at her out of the corner of his eye as he held up a hand for a waiter, gave his order—and one for a replenishment of Starr's glass. There was quizzical surprise in his eyes.

"Snappy comeback," he remarked. "You'd hardly expect it—here." Then he laughed. "But I'd forgotten you got pretty mad today when I made a little crack about Egypt. Know about the gods as well as the Fates?" "La il aha illa Allah!" said Starr softly. How could she ever once have sworn to forget everything Egyptian—the Arabs, their sayings, their Allah; all?

The man's eyes widened and he stared at her.

Has Had Great Success

Polish Peasant Uses Certain Chemicals To Produce Rain

The claim that he can cause rain to fall at will is made by a peasant at the Polish village of Grutkowie. Every demonstration of his method has so far proved successful. The peasant, Wladyslaw Skiersza, uses certain chemical substances for his tests. At one demonstration in the presence of newspaper correspondents he produced a number of bottles and jars containing these substances. He uncorked them and poured the contents on the ground. A few hours later clouds appeared and heavy rain fell over a considerable area. The inventor refuses to disclose the nature of his mysterious chemicals. But he declares he is willing to repeat his experiments at any time in the presence of meteorological experts.

Cannot Be Salvaged

"Time waste differs from material waste," said Henry Ford, "in that there can be no salvage." Then comes this thoughtful sentence: "This easiest of all wastes, and the hardest to correct, is this waste of time, because wasted time does not litter the floor like wasted material."

Leprosy, once very prevalent in England, and one of the oldest plagues of mankind, numbers about 6,000,000 cases in the world, about 100 of them in England at the present time.

Little Helps For This Week

Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor, for we are members one of another. Ephesians 4:25.

In conversation be sincere. Keep conscience as the noontide-clear; Think how All-seeing God thy ways And all thy secret thoughts surveys.

The essence of lying is in deception, not in words. A lie may be told by silence, by the accent on a syllable, by a glance that attaches a peculiar significance to a sentence, and all these kinds of lies are worse and more base by many degrees than a lie plainly worded. No form of blinded conscience is so far sunk as that which comforts itself for having deceived because the deception was a gesture or silence instead of utterance. He that is in the habit of being deceptive in trifles will try in vain to be true in matters of importance, for truth is a thing of habit rather than will. You cannot in any case by any sudden and single effort, will to be true if the habit of your life has been insincerity.

Not All Superstition

India Has Good Reason To Regard Cow As Sacred

If the cow is a sacred animal in India, it is for a reason more profound than popular superstition. What is sometimes superficially regarded as an idle fancy of the masses is found on examination to hold deep truths. The legend of the cow belongs to this order. People in Ceylon who have neglected the culture of the cow were sternly reminded of their remissness during the malaria epidemic. The disease took a severe toll because the masses lacked the stamina to resist malaria. They were deficient in those properties which milk foods in particular provide. No wonder the Hindus hold the cow in veneration as the life-giver. By milk and ghee and other products she sustains the consumer in a way in which no substitute can. — Times of Ceylon, Colombo.

Make Good Friends

Rescued by searchers after lying helpless with a broken hip 22 hours, after a fall, P. L. Comiskey, of Withersfield Station, Queensland, told how his two dogs protected him from wild dogs and kept him warm while his horse stood by him. "Always be kind to dogs and horses," he said, "they repay you."

No Scrip In Ministers August Salaries

Alberta's cabinet ministers were not paid a proportion of their August salaries in stamped scrip, though
Hon. Lucien Maynard, minister without portfolio, had stated this would be done, it was revealed last weekend.

Several weeks ago the minister was reported as stating that the ministers were to take part of their August pay in scrip, but the percentage had not been decided. Now it appears that the ministers again drew their month's pay in Canadian currency, just as was done by other members of the civil service.

It was also noted that members of the legislature, of whom 56 are Social Creditors, drew their $200.00 special sessional allowance in the official government cheques. None took even a proportion of scrip.

A government spokesman stated
Friday that there was no scrip available at present for the civil service.
The issue was used mainly for purposes of relief. Until this returns there would not be anything available for the civil service.
